Vote Bill. Last of Reform Legislation for City, Passes House, 124 to 47

By a Staff Correspondent Harrisburg, June 25 .- The last link in the charter chain was forged this afternoon when Governor Sproul at tached his signature to the Woodward charter bill. Elaborate ceremonies, free to all who wished to be present, marked the signing of the bill in the executive reception room in the Capitol. Prominent charter revisionists par ticipated in the ceremony.

Who Gets the Pen

There is much speculation as to whom the Governor will give the pen with which he signed the bill. There is a decided opinion that it should go to John C. Winston, chairman of the charter revision committee. Others think it should be given to Senator Woodward, the sponsor of the measure. None of the other Philadelphia bills will

The Woodward bill, providing that the intention of the voter in marking his ballot shall prevail, the last of the series of Philadelphia reform bills, passed the House yesterday afternoon after the Vare forces made a weak attempt to block it. The vote on the bill was 124 to 47.

Representative Ramsey, of Delaware, called up the bill just at a moment when the House was in facetious mood. Reparesentative Glass, taking advantage of this, attempted to speak against the bill, but the membership at large shouted and yelled for an affirmative vote. When Glass was able to make himself heard he moved that the bill be stricken from the calendar. He was greeted with shouts of derision. Paperesentative Cox rapped for order and Glass continued:

"Mr. Speaker, the members may think this is fun, but we have several important bills before us and this is one of them."

No Second to Motion

Mr. Glass persisted in making his motion but as there was no second to it, Mr. Cox was forced to bang his gavel and announce that the roll would be called. All the Vare members in the House at the time voted against the bill. After the vote had been announce, ed., Mr. Glass asked to be informed how Mr. Heyburn, of Delaware voted.
